Tips For Warmth And Safety

(NAPSI)-Now is a good time for homeowners to have trained, qualified professionals-such as HVAC (heating, ventilating and air-conditioning) technicians or gas company representatives-perform comprehensive checkups of their home heating systems. According to a recent survey conducted by the Propane Education & Research Council (PERC), however, just one in four homeowners has a professional inspection every year, while one in five has never had a home heating inspection. The survey also found that those who skip such inspections cite concerns over costs and the belief that they can perform such checkups on their own.

Armed with these statistics, Danny Lipford, veteran home remodeler and host of the popular television show "Today's Homeowner with Danny Lipford," reminds homeowners with gas-operated home heating systems of to-dos designed to keep families safe and warm. Lipford and PERC also emphasize that while there are home maintenance tasks you can perform yourself, others should be left to professionals.

The following is a list of recommended to-dos for homeowners:

Give your home its annual checkup

An annual checkup by a home heating professional helps ensure that a homeowner's heating system is operating efficiently and is properly maintained. "The investment in a yearly professional inspection is worth it and could save your family money in the long run," says Lipford. According to the PERC survey, homeowners who rely on regular inspections find that efficient heating system performance, avoidance of major repairs, and peace of mind are significant benefits.

Important maintenance steps homeowners can take on their own include regularly changing or cleaning furnace filters and checking vents to be sure they are free from obstructions.

Leave it to the pros

Only a trained and qualified service technician has the proper training to install, service, maintain and repair gas appliances. "Don't try to modify or repair valves, regulators or other cylinder or appliance parts. Leave this to the pros," advises Lipford.

Have Monitoring in Place

Carbon monoxide, gas and smoke detectors are critical to home safety, yet one in three homes is without one or more of these important devices, according to the homeowner survey. "Installing monitors is one item on your list that you shouldn't put off," says Lipford. "If you already have them installed, use this time to ensure they are working properly."

While household gas leaks are rare, knowing precautionary measures is important. "Should you or a family member smell gas from an unknown source [both natural gas and propane have a distinct rotten egg odor], leave the house immediately—then call emergency services and the gas company," says Lipford.

Leave space when storing

When moving items indoors for storage, don't put anything—boxes, paint, clothing, furniture and so on—near gas appliances. Read the instruction manual that comes with your gas appliance to find information on this important matter.

For more information on home heating system maintenance and monitoring, visit www.usepropane.com.

Call For Repair? Appliances Now Do It For You

(NAPSI)-While household appliances have continued to evolve over the years, one aspect has stayed the same: the occasional breakdown and need for service. Thanks to the latest technology, however, even the traditional repair call has gotten an upgrade.

A new kind of service program proactively monitors appliances 24 hours a day, seven days a week and reports any faults or potential problems to a service center. A fault code will either trigger an automated e-mail (offering a corrective strategy) or analysis by a technician who, if need be, will schedule a service appointment.

Using wireless, local area network technology and application software, Miele's RemoteVision-enabled products are monitored 24/7. This dedicated "link" allows for the secured transmission of vital performance data.

The most common service issues are user-related faults, whether it's a refrigerator door left ajar or a washing machine with too much detergent. Through modern technology, these former aggravations now have easy, identifiable solutions. Owners might be provided with care recommendations, troubleshooting e-mails, or service notifications alerting them that an in-person appointment is recommended, all tailored to the product and problem.

"With RemoteVision, we can help to immediately correct or even prevent an issue simply by contacting a customer and avoiding any potential frustration or downtime," says Matthew Kueny, Miele's director of technology. The system is now available for all the company's refrigerators, wine coolers and select washer and dishwasher models.

Low-Cost Way To Save

(NAPSI)-Cleaning your home's heating/cooling system can do a lot more than improve the quality of the circulating air. It can also make a huge difference in your monthly utility bills.

That's because dust and debris reduce the ability of a home's heating and cooling system to work properly. Consider that dirty systems-especially dirty coils-use up to 30 percent more energy to heat and cool the home.

Meanwhile, dirty filters block airflow through the system, increasing your energy bill and shortening the equipment's life. Contaminants that don't get caught by either the filter or the coils are then blown through the rest of the system. These contaminants build up in the ductwork over time, so the system must work harder and longer to achieve the desired comfort level, using more energy and costing more.

Changing the filter regularly can help, but eventually the system must be cleaned to run at optimum efficiency. To find an Air Systems Cleaning Specialist near you, visit the National Air Duct Cleaners Association at www.nadca.com.

Home Projects Start With A Great Finish

(NAPSI)-An inexpensive way to help your home's exterior look elegant for years to come can be done by refinishing the wood.

Amazingly, you can get professional-looking results even if you do it yourself. Here are a few tips from Tom Lee, vice president marketing at Behr and an expert in stains and finishes:

Tips for Wood Staining Projects

1. Pick the finish.

Lightly wood-toned finishes add color to wood while enhancing the wood's natural beauty. These last longer than traditional clear finishes. Semi-transparent stains let the natural grain and texture of the wood show through and provide more durability than clear or wood-toned products. The most durable finish, solid color stains reveal the wood's texture but generally conceal the grain, making them good for older, blemished wood and projects using different types of wood.

2. Prepare the surface.

For best results always follow the label instructions on the wood stain products and any wood stripper or wood cleaning products used to prepare the surface.

- Use plastic sheeting and painter's tape to cover all items that cannot be removed (planter boxes, air conditioning units, drains, etc.). Wet vegetation with a garden hose and cover with drop cloths for protection from overspray and drips.

- Be sure to use any recommended personal protective equipment such as masks and gloves.

- Replace any damaged wood.
- Check to be sure you are using the appropriate sanding tool for the surface (sanding block, pole sander, sanding pads, etc.) and lightly sand the surface with 80- to 100-grit sandpaper.

- Clean surface and remove mildew stains if necessary.

3. Apply wood stain.

- Pour the stain or finish into a paint tray or 5-gallon bucket.
- Starting in a corner and following the grain of the wood, cut in a 2- to 3-inch-wide area with a brush where a roller cannot reach. Cutting in means applying stain to the outer edges of the project area with a brush before rolling.

- Dip roller into the product.
- Remove excess product by rolling onto the ribbed section of the paint tray or bucket grid.

- Continuing in the same corner, roll the product approximately five feet onto the surface that was cut in. Don't overlap onto a surface not being completed.

- Immediately brush out roller-applied stain to unify the appearance and work the stain into the wood.

- Reload the roller and apply the product to the next section, back rolling into the previously applied area. Continue until the project is complete.

Behr offers Premium Solid Color and Semi-Transparent Weatherproofing Wood Stains and Transparent and Wood-Toned Wood Finishes that use an advanced 100 percent acrylic resin to protect decks, siding and fences from sun, rain, snow and ice for years.

The new formula allows the stains and finishes to penetrate even deeper into wood fibers and provides a superior adhesive bond to the wood substrate. Made with NanoGuard technology, the improved formulation was developed to enhance resistance against moisture, UV damage and stains--the result is improved surface protection and longevity. The added durability reduces the likelihood of peeling, improves performance over knots and increases color retention. The complete protection against the elements results in a beautiful-looking, longer-lasting exterior wood surface.

What's more, Behr's Premium Exterior Weatherproofing Wood Stains are available in 8-ounce samples that let you test color and opacity before you buy. In addition, you can use the samples for small projects such as bird feeders, mailboxes, kids' craft projects and doll houses.

These stains and finishes are available exclusively at The Home Depot where you can also get help on applicator recommendations, product selection and project inspiration at the interactive WoodSmart by Behr Kiosk. The kiosk also features a video demonstrating proper application and time-saving tips.

Taking A Vacation? Make Sure To Secure Your Home First

(NAPSI)-Four to five minutes—that could be the difference between whether or not your return home from vacation is ruined by a burglar.

According to experts, that's the maximum time most thieves will spend trying to break into a house before giving up in search of easier prey. That holds true year-round, whether you're blissfully off on a winter ski getaway or spending the summer on the beach.

"People don't realize that going on vacation can be an invitation for would-be thieves," says Mike Convery, vice president and chief claim officer at MetLife Auto & Home®. "Or that the average burglary will result in a loss of more than $2,000."

In fact, the Insurance Information Institute indicates nine out of 10 break-ins could have been prevented if homeowners had burglar-proofed their properties. The simple act of locking your doors before leaving home can go a long way toward deterring a burglar.

According to the U.S. Department of Justice, more than 50 percent of burglars use an unlocked door or window to gain access to a home.

How else can you avoid returning to a home that's been ransacked? Read on for some "Do's" and "Don'ts" from the experts:

DON'T advertise you're away. Arrange to have the lawn mowed, put lights and electronics on variable timers, and—to really complete the illusion—ask a neighbor to park a car in your driveway.

DO make would-be thieves feel both exposed and contained. Choose picket or chain-link fencing instead of solid fencing to create a physical barrier that's less easy to hide behind. Keep hedges clipped to around waist level.

DON'T hesitate to rearrange things. Those expensive belongings, including TVs and stereo systems, might as well have a sign on them saying "Take Me" if they're left in plain view from windows and doors.

DO get an assist from technology. A solar-powered, motion-sensor light—which doesn't require an electrician to install—illuminates your property so that lurking intruders are easier for neighbors and passing patrol cars to spot.

DON'T hide keys in "secret places" outside your home. Most burglars know where to look. Better to leave a duplicate with someone you trust.

DO invest in a burglar alarm. The most effective ones notify an outside service of trouble, but any kind is a good deterrent. Just make sure there's a friend or family member available to turn it off if it's set off in your absence.

One last thing: "In addition to those preventive measures, all homeowners should complete a personal property inventory," says Convery. "That way, if you are burglarized, you'll already have a detailed list of your valuables for the authorities, which can be a difficult task after the fact."

You can get a free Personal Property Inventory brochure from MetLife Auto & Home by calling (800) 608-0190.

Green Organization Tips For Increased Productivity, Less Stress

(NAPSI)-Organizing your home can reduce stress levels, and there are easy ways to declutter while being mindful of the environment, suggests Lorie Marrero, author of "The Clutter Diet: The Skinny on Organizing Your Home and Taking Control of Your Life."

She offers these eight green, environmentally conscious ideas:

- Start with a prioritized task list to stay on track. Why not use a notebook that you can reuse over and over? M by Staples makes a reusable journal with refillable paper that is the perfect size to carry with you for any on-the-go additions to the list.

- Prevent having to recycle junk mail by removing your name from mailing lists. Register with the Mail Preference Service at www.dmachoice.org.

- When you do organize, you often need to clean off a shelf or wash a window to make the space feel finished. Clean up with environmentally friendly cleaners such as Sustainable Earth by Staples, which minimizes environmental impact both in general and inside your home.

- Instead of using paper towels, recycle old clothing and towels into cleaning rags. Tear them or mark them with a big "X" with a marker, so that you avoid getting them mixed back into your regular clothing and linens.

- Make it official with your recycling efforts—give this function a dedicated space in your home, either in your mudroom, garage or kitchen, so that it isn't constantly in your way. You might want an intermediate bin you can take to the larger bin to empty in the garage when it's full.

- Recycle your technology items such as computers, monitors, fax machines and printers at Staples stores and donate items you don't need—from clothes to furniture—to local organizations.

- Save shredded paper for packing material. This gives it a second life and saves you money on packing supplies.

- When you make an office purchase, look for products of high quality that will last, rather than products that you will need to discard and replace. Marrero really appreciates OXO Good Grips office products (available at Staples or www.staples.com) for just this reason—they are designed well and weighted to feel solid and durable in your hand.

Essential Tools For Everyday Repairs

(NAPSI)—No matter the age of your home, regular maintenance is essential for keeping your space comfortable and future repair costs down. It's better to address minor repairs as they come up, before they become big problems. The good news is that you don't need a lot of professional tools to get the job done. Here are a few favorites from Timothy Dahl, founder and editor at CharlesandHudson.com, which come in handy for most home repairs. The website is an independent resource for do-it-yourself enthusiasts seeking the latest in home improvement tips and techniques as well as the finest tools and hottest news in the home building industry.

Tool bag—An essential for storing your tools so they are protected from the elements and easily accessible. Searching through drawers and boxes for the tool you need ASAP isn't fun. A military-grade tool bag from an Army/Navy surplus store has plenty of pockets and is lightweight and made of durable canvas material.

Flashlights—You can't fix what you can't see, and the Energizer Hard Case Professional Inspection Light keeps your work space properly illuminated. Its white LED is intense and the housing is lightweight and easy to maneuver into tight spaces. With a diameter just over ½", it doesn't take up a lot of space in your tool bag, but is tough enough to get jostled around and dropped without breaking.

The company also recently introduced the Energizer Hard Case Professional Area Light, which can mount above workbenches or anywhere you'd rather not have to run electrical wiring. It also comes with a magnetic backing for easy mounting under the hood of a car or on any metal surfaces.

Screwdrivers—You should have a set that includes a variety of lengths and diameters of driver heads and slot sizes. Choose quality name brands such as Stanley or Craftsman and make sure the handles are comfortable and easy to grip.

Pliers—There is a wide variety of pliers designed for various home improvement projects, but needle-nose pliers do the trick most every time. Make sure the grip isn't too large to open and close with one hand, and a spring-loaded mechanism can help for quicker, simpler opening.

Hammer—Like pliers, there are a multitude of hammers for every job. Select a basic eight-ounce model that's easy to swing and has a steel head and wood handle for better vibration dampening, such as those from Estwing.

Measuring tape—For repairs and decorating projects, a measuring tape is one of your most important tools. A good 24-foot tape should handle all your applications. The ones from Komelon are especially durable and lightweight.

Preparing yourself with the appropriate tools before tackling home repairs can help you get the job done right and with time to spare. Indoor Comfort, Down-To-Earth Savings (NAPSI)—Homeowners across North America have discovered the benefits of using the energy under their own backyards to provide heating, cooling and hot water. Geothermal heating and cooling systems tap into the constant temperature found a few feet below the surface of the earth to deliver a consistent, even flow of conditioned air throughout the home, eliminating hot and cold spots.

A geothermal system captures the free energy from the earth in a series of pipes, called an earth loop, buried in the ground. Fluid circulates through the pipes and heat energy is transferred from the ground to the geothermal unit in the house, providing warm comfort. Once inside, the heat can be distributed through either a conventional duct system or a hydronic radiant heat system.

According to studies by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), geothermal heating and cooling is the most energy-efficient option available, because the system relies on the most plentiful source of renewable energy and a source that is available virtually anywhere in the United States.

The result is a system that achieves green status in more ways than one: Homeowners can reduce their carbon footprint along with their utility bills. In fact, the energy savings provided by a geothermal system can be as much as 70 percent compared with a conventional system using natural gas, oil, electricity or propane fuel. Additionally, the system eliminates noise pollution, with a sound level similar to that of a refrigerator.

A geothermal system also addresses pollutants in the air. According to EPA tests, levels of pollutants are two to five times higher indoors than outside. Research also shows that exposure to poor indoor air quality can cause health problems including asthma, dizziness, fatigue and respiratory diseases, among many others.

The geothermal systems from WaterFurnace International, Incorporated, the leading manufacturer of geothermal heating and cooling products, have HEPA filters, heat recovery ventilators, electronic air cleaners and a selection of filters, all designed to contribute to good air quality throughout the home.
